Sen. Ridley has high hopes for Senate

New leadership has 'more cooperative spirit'

By Frank Boyett

fboyett@thegleaner.com 270-831-8342

Frankfort has not yet become a fairy-tale land of unicorns and magic carpets, but the atmosphere has definitely improved with new leadership in the Kentucky Senate, according to state Sen. Dorsey Ridley.

The new Senate president,

Sen. Robert Stivers, R-Manchester, has pledged an end to "gotcha politics" and "it appears that the mean-spiritedness is gone," he told the Henderson Chamber of Commerce's legislative preview breakfast Monday morning at the Henderson Country

"The amount of indigestion medicine sold in Frankfort has exponentially gone down," he said, which brought laughter and a round of applause.

Stivers replaced David Williams as Senate president after the latter was appointed to a circuit judgeship by the governor.

"It changes the style, it changes the tone to a more cooperative spirit," Ridley said. "It's a new day" because of increased efforts by both Republicans and Democrats at working together.

For instance, he said, in his 28 years of association with the General Assembly he has never seen a bipartisan luncheon of all senators like what happened recently.

"I heard the new president of the Senate say to his members as they walked in the door, 'Every other seat, every other seat.' We all intertwined with one another just to have friendly conversation. It was really great fun."

But more concrete advancement was made in the field of committee assignments. "In the past our president of the Senate literally vetoed the opportunity for members to serve on the committees where they thought they could best serve their constituents. Today, that's not true. I had the opportunity to choose the committees I wanted to be on. That is a huge change."

Those changes foster hope

Tanker fire closes Pennyrile Parkway

Emergency and cleanup workers survey the scene of a tanker truck fire on the southbound Pennyrile Parkway near mile marker 53 between Slaughters and Hanson Monday morning. The accident closed both north- and southbound lanes for several hours.

Chemical spill, blaze diverts traffic to U.S. 41

Gleaner staff

Traffic on the Pennyrile Parkway was disrupted for much of the day Monday because of a fire involving a tanker truck carrying hydrochloric acid near the Webster-Hopkins county line.

Kentucky State Police reported that truck driver Christopher W. Reynolds, 52, of Corydon was traveling southbound when the tanker-trailer caught fire at 6 a.m. Monday just south of the Slaughters exit.

Reynolds was able to disconnect the 2007 International tractor he was driving from the trailer, preventing the fire from spreading to the rig.

State police didn't immediately release a cause of the fire, although one news report said a problem with the trailer's brakes may have been responsible.

No injuries were reported. However, the parkway was closed in both directions for several hours because of concerns regarding the release of vapors

Motorists were detoured to nearby U.S. 41 between the exits at Slaughters (milemarker 54) and Hanson (milemarker 49), slowing travel between Henderson and Madisonville for hours.

The northbound lanes were

Insurance change will have little local effect

■ Tri-county schools are no longer part of troubled provider

By Erin Schmitt erin.schmitt@thegleaner.com 270-831-8341

Kentucky school districts being walloped with an unexpected bill for some $60 million in past insurance claims are considering using bonding to soften the financial blow.

The financially troubled Kentucky School Boards Insurance Trust is going out of business on June 30, forcing school districts across the state to search for new providers of workers' compensation, property and liability insurance policies.

Three school districts not looking for new providers are Henderson, Webster and Union.

Taking stock of the agency's troubled financial situation, Henderson County Schools pulled out of the KSBIT coverage about five or six years ago, said Walt Spencer, the district's assistant superindent of finance. Neither Union County Schools nor Webster County Schools are covered by the insurance carrier, although, like Henderson County Schools, both were insured through KSBIT in the past. The insurance trust disbanding doesn't shock

Spencer. 'We took a deep look at their financial position and tried to have them explain it to us," he said. "We just didn't feel comfortable at all with the financial position they were in. We sort of assumed this would happen, we just didn't know when. We didn't want to be holding an

Henderson jail officials seize contraband from federal inmates being housed here

By Beth Smith bsmith@thegleaner.com 270-831-8334

Henderson County jail employees seized contraband, including a cellular phone used to make international calls, from federal inmates transported here from a maximum-security facility in Indiana. The investigation began late Friday afternoon when transport officers with the Henderson County Detention Center received information that five federal inmates being brought to Henderson from Indiana's Pendleton Correctional Facility might be in possession of contraband, according to Col. Amy Martin.

"Our transport team is very alert ... Before they left the (Indiana) prison, they picked up on the issue of the cellphone," she said.

The five inmates were given the standard patdown searches before being transported to Henderson, she said. However, the cellular phone was not located.

Due to the inmates each having a federal charge pending of using a cellphone to assist in drug trafficking, Martin said that once they got to the Henderson jail, officials decided "for the safety and security of the facil-

Jack Conway considering run for governor

■ Attorney general's political success makes him familiar to Kentuckians

By Roger Alford Associated Press

FRANKFORT-One of Kentucky's most recognizable political figures is letting a bevy of would-be candidates know they may have to get past him if they want to be the state's next governor.

Democratic Attorney General Jack Conway told The Associated Press he's taking "a very, very serious look" at running in the 2015 election, a move that could ward off some potential challengers for his party's nomination to replace Gov. Steve Bes-

"To me, it's still awfully early," he said Friday. "But there's been a lot of jockeying. It seems the ink wasn't even dry on Steve Beshear's re-election and people were already talking about it."

Three statewide campaigns in the past five years have enhanced Conway's name recog-

He was elected attorney general in 2007 and re-elected in 2011. He ran in a high-profile race for U.S. Senate in 2010, which he ended up losing to Republican Altogether, Conway has spent about $10 million in those three races, largely on TV advertising that built his brand.

Conway had about twice that much spent against him, making him a familiar face to nearly every family in Kentucky.

For now, Conway said he intends to concentrate on doing his job as attorney general and will deal with the governor's

"There's still a lot of time," he said. "If I think I can be successful in accomplishing some things, then I will sit down and talk to my family about it, and we'll make a family decision. But I'm going to take a very, very serious look at it."

Lew deserves quick, easy confirmation

It says something about White House chief of staff Jack Lew's patriotism, or perhaps his appetite for punishment, that when President Barack Obama > offered him the post of Treasury secretary he didn't run screaming down the White House driveway.

Other Cabinet secretaries face grueling second-term battles with Congress — military downsizing, immigration overhaul, gun control, infrastructure spending — but Lew, at Treasury, must deal with two of the most intractable and unavoidable confrontations: deficit reduction now and overhaul of the tax code later.

Most immediately, Lew, as the Obama administration's chief financial negotiator with Congress, must somehow finesse Republican opposition to tax increases and congressional Democrats' equally adamant resistance to any cuts in entitlement programs such as Medicare and Social Security. It doesn't seem to faze Congress that most economists believe any credible deficit-reduction program must include some of both.

Further complicating his task is an increase in the government's ability to borrow that comes due in February. Not doing so again could damage the country's credit rating. Congress, playing chicken with the administration, walked up to the edge of that cliff once and pulled back, but all it would take to go over is one serious miscalculation by the GOP's tea party movement hard-liners.

And then, unless Congress acts, Lew faces mandatory and heavy-handed across-the-board spending cuts beginning March 1.

Lew has held senior posts in both the Clinton and Obama administrations, most notably as White House budget director, so experience isn't a question and, having undergone several confirmation hearings, his background has been repeatedly vet-

Nonetheless, Lew is likely to be thoroughly roughed up in confirmation hearings before the Senate Finance Committee and on the Senate floor.

Lew's confirmation will give the parties an ideal occasion to vent, but in the end Lew deserves, and has earned, a quick confirmation.

Regulators find nothing scary about fracking

If frackophobes are to be believed, natural gas fracking is the most frightful environmental nightmare since Japan's Fukushima nuclear power plant melted down after an earthquake and tsunami.

In "Promised Land," Matt Damon's new antifracking movie — funded in part by the United Arab Emirates — one character demonstrates this production technique's "dangers" by drenching a toy farm with household chemicals and then setting it ablaze.

In the upcoming profracking film, "Fracknation," one Pennsylvania homeowner absurdly claims that fracking polluted his well water with weapons-grade uranium.

In a New Yorkers Against Fracking poster, the Statue of Liberty furiously topples natural gas drilling towers with her torch as energy company 18-wheelers flee in horror.

These warnings might be believable if fracking regulators seemed even slightly worried. Instead, federal and state environmental officials appear positively serene about hydraulic fracturing, a decades-old technology that uses sand and chemically treated water to shatter shale deposits far below the water table and liberate natural gas from the ruptured rocks.

■"In no case have we made a definitive determination that the fracking process has caused chemicals to enter groundwater," Environmental Protection Agency administrator Lisa Jackson said last April. In May 2011, she testified on Capitol Hill: "I'm not aware of any proven case where the fracking process itself has affected water."

■ The EPA tested drinking water in Dimock, Pa., which ecologists claim fracking has tainted. "EPA has determined that there are not levels of contaminants present that would require additional action by the agency," it concluded last July. ■"A study that examined the water quality of 127 shallow domestic wells in the Fayetteville Shale natural gas production area of Arkansas found no groundwater contamination associated with gas production," the U.S. Geological Survey announced Wednesday.

■ "Significant adverse impacts on human health are not expected from routine HVHF," or high-volume hydraulic fracturing, according to a February 2012 preliminary report from New York's Department of Environmental Conservation. New York Gov. Andrew Cuomo has pondered this issue since 2010 and promises further contemplation, including another draft of what DEC now calls an "outdated summary.'

any cases of groundwater contamination from hydraulic fracturing," Elizabeth Ames Jones said in 2011. The then-Chairman of the Texas Railroad Commission, which supervises natural gas, added: "It is geologically impossible for fracturing fluid to reach an aquifer a thousand feet above."

■"We have never had

■ While California last month unveiled new disclosure and monitoring rules for fracking, State Oil & Gas Supervisor Tim Kustic told the San Jose Mercury News: "There is fracking in groundwater in California at this point in time. And it has been going on for many years.'

■"We've used hydraulic fracturing for some 60 years in Oklahoma, and we have no confirmed cases where it is responsible for drinking water contamination — nor do any of the other natural gas-producing states," Corp. Commission Chairman Bob Anthony wrote in August 2010.

■"In the 41 years that I have supervised oil and gas exploration, production and development in South Dakota, no documented case of water-well or aquifer damage by the fracking of oil or gas wells, has been brought to my attention," said the Department of Environment's Fred Steece. "Nor am I aware of any such cases before my time."

The Americans quoted here are neither gas company executives nor natural gas publicists. These are public servants who oversee this industry, and many work or have worked for red-tape-loving Democrats. Nonetheless, they are unafraid of fracking. Thus, frackophobes have no evidence of harm from nothing to offer but fear

History says Obama faces tough second term

The start of the new year, and also of President Barack Obama's second term, is a good time to pause for perspective on the sources of the current political constellation in our country. To help understand the recent national electoral success of Obama and the Democratic Party, study Al Smith. Who?

Alfred E. Smith was governor of New York State and the Democratic Party's presidential nominee in 1928. He was also the first Roman Catholic candidate to be chosen for national office by a major party. He was buried in the enormous Republican election landslide that carried Herbert Hoover to the White House, and reinforced that party's strong grip on majorities in both houses of Congress.

Hoover at the time was the most popular political figure in America. He was a gifted engineer and highly effective executive who got things done. Vast programs of humanitarian relief for Europe in the wake ARTHUR R. CYR of World War I, and for the Mississippi River valley in the wake of devastating floods in 1927, were overseen by this leader, who was also above reproach in personal ethics.

However, in 1928 Smith won the 12 biggest cities beginning with New York and ending with Los Angeles — with an overall plurality, reversing previous Republican dominance in these areas. Samuel Lubell, a brilliant journalist as well as scholar, insightfully describes the phenomenon in his book "The Future of American Politics," published in 1952.

Not surprisingly in that different time, a quartercentury before the modern South began developing, all of the largest cities were in Northern states.

In the North, newly arriving immigrants from Europe had suffered severely from intense ingrained ethnic bigotry. The Irish in particular experienced devastating discrimination by dominant groups.

Immigrants found relief through Democratic Party local organizations, using resulting practical leverage to gain desperately needed employment in the fire and police departments, and other city services. Those jobs could be tedious as well as dangerous but brought regular pay, and usually involved some security.

After World War II, the big cities were challenged and then overcome by the rapidly expanding suburbs. Earlier rural-urban divisions faded. In 1960, suburbs for the first time had a plurality of the electorate. By 1992, the suburbs held a majority. John F. Kennedy and Bill Clinton demonstrated strong appeal in the suburbs.

In the 1950s, popular commentaries often casually referred to the suburbs as Republican, but that was not actually true. They were more Eisenhower suburbs — the incredibly popular Republican Dwight Eisenhower carried them as he did the rest of the country. Suburban residents, however, did not completely abandon the Democratic sympathies of their parents and grandparents. As reference to Ike implies, individual leaders are crucial. FDR was essential to forging the new Democratic Party majority, combining expanding urban centers and the traditionally Democratic South. Ronald Reagan was brilliantly successful in drawing working people away from their Democratic Party loyalties.

As a result of the Great Depression, President Herbert Hoover became widely reviled, and was rejected overwhelmingly in the 1932 election. Every post-World War II president except Eisenhower has run into serious trouble during his second term.

Re-elected presidents should remember the adage of ancient Rome "All glory is fleeting."

Scrutiny has mounted over the number of women and minorities who will surround the nation's first black president in his second term. Cabinet members who are departing at the end of his first term are being replaced largely by white males. But in the final White House news conference of his first term, Obama asked for critics to hold their tongues until the remaining vacancies have been filled.

"I'm very proud that in the first four years, we had as diverse, if not a more diverse, White House and a Cabinet than any in history," Obama said. "I intended to continue that, because it turns out when you look for the very best people, given the incredible diversity of this country, you're going to end up with a diverse staff."

■ Members seek solutions after tragedy

By John Christoffersen Associated Press

NEWTOWN, Conn. — Parents of children slain in the Connecticut school massacre held photos of their sons and daughters, cried, hugged and spoke in quavering voices as they called for a national dialogue to help prevent similar tragedies.

"I do not want to be someone sharing my experience and consoling another parent next time. I do not want there to be a next time," said Nicole Hockley, whose son Dylan was among the 20 first-graders and six adults killed by a gunman a month ago at Sandy Hook Elementary School.

Members of the newly formed group Sandy Hook Promise spoke out as politicians from Maine to New Mexico marked the one month that has passed since the shooting with renewed demands for tighter gun control.

The Sandy Hook group said it wants to have openminded discussions about a range of issues, including guns, mental health and safety in schools and other public places. Several speakers said they did not believe there was a single solution.

"We want the Sandy Hook school shootings to be recalled as the turning point where we brought our community and communities across the nation together and set a real course for change," said group co-founder Tom Bittman.

While the Sandy Hook group did not offer specific remedies, mayors and governors in favor of tighter gun restrictions lobbied for a series of them Monday.

New York Mayor Michael Bloomberg addressed a summit on gun violence at Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore and argued for greater federal gun control, including background checks for all purchases and a federal crackdown on trafficking.

"Every state in the union has citizens killed by guns coming from another state and every state is powerless to stop the mayhem," Bloomberg said.

Bloomberg is co-chairman of Mayors Against Illegal Guns, whose members spoke out Monday in cities including Portland, Maine; Fort Wayne, Ind.; and Santa Fe, N.M.

Trial over water pollution begins

CONCORD – The first day of trial in a huge pollution lawsuit ended with lawyers for the state of New Hampshire and two big oil companies accusing the other of misleading jurors in opening statements.

Citgo's lawyer, Nathan Eimer, demanded a mistrial Monday, saying the state's lawyer used what he described as a fabricated document in arguing that the company knew the groundwater contamination potential of the gasoline additive MTBE.

Jessica Grant, countered that the opening statement by ExxonMobil attorney James Quinn was rife with falsehoods. The judge denied Citgo's motion for a mistrial.

Senator optimistic about Afghanistan

WASHINGTON—The United States should keep a residual force of about 10,000 in Afghanistan after combat forces leave at the end of 2014, the Senate Republican leader said Monday after a series of meetings with military leaders in the country.

Sen. Mitch McConnell, who led a congressional delegation to Afghanistan and Israel, expressed optimism about an 11-year war that now stands as the longest in American history, and the prospect of Afghans assuming a lead role in the fighting.

"My observation about Afghanistan at this point is this is the first time I've left there with a sense of optimism," he said. "I think there's a widely held view among the American military leaders there — we met with Gen. (John) Allen — that this has a very great potential for a happy ending after 2014, provided we have a residual force that we can provide for training."

Voter intimidation order to continue

WASHINGTON - The Supreme Court has turned down an effort by the Republican National Committee to end a 30-year-old court order aimed at preventing intimidation of minority voters.

The justices did not comment Monday in rejecting an appeal of lower court decisions that left the order in place at least until 2017.

The order stems from a lawsuit filed by Democrats in New Jersey in 1981 that objected to a "ballot security" program the RNC ran in minority neighborhoods.

Prosecution uses emails in terror trial

PORTLAND—Justice Department attorneys used emails between an Oregon man and suspected terrorists overseas to try to show he was already on the path to radicalization by the time the FBI made him the subject of a yearlong terrorism sting operation.

The assertion goes to the heart of a trial in which Mohamed Mohamud faces terrorism charges for allegedly trying to detonate a bomb in Portland in November 2010. The bomb was a fake supplied by the FBI.

Mohamud was 19 when he was arrested and his defense team has said the FBI entrapped him. Key to the defense is proving Mohamud had no predisposition to terrorism before the FBI got involved.

Thousands gather to protest in capital

ISLAMABAD — Thousands of Pakistanis fed up with a government they say is corrupt and indifferent to the plight of common citizens descended on the capital Monday, responding to the call of a charismatic cleric who has quickly become a powerful but mysterious political force.

The dramatic entry into Pakistani politics of Tahir-ul-Qadri, a preacher who until recently lived in Canada, has sparked concern from some that he is seeking to derail elections expected this spring at the behest of the powerful army.

Qadri has denied those allegations and insisted his vaguely worded demands for election reform are simply meant to root out corruption in the political system. He pledged several weeks ago to lead a "million-man march" on Islamabad on Monday to press his demands.

Government to invest in disputed sites

JERUSALEM – Israel is advancing a plan to invest in places it considers part of its national heritage, including nine West Bank sites, the government said Monday in an announcement that could appeal to hard-line voters a week ahead of elections. It triggered an angry Palestinian response.

Israeli Cabinet Secretary Tzvi Hauser said Israel is adding handicapped access to the Tomb of the Patriarchs, a sensitive site in the West Bank city of Hebron sacred to both Jews and Muslims.

The U.S. objected to Israel's initial 2010 announcement that it would label the shrine an Israeli heritage site, charging it impeded peace efforts.

Neuendorf told The Associated Press Monday that the tunnel was "very professional" and must have taken weeks or even months to complete. It was elaborately constructed and even had ceiling supports.

Court won't halt Berlusconi's sex trial

MILAN – A Milan court on Monday rejected a bid by former Premier Silvio Berlusconi to halt his sex-forhire trial for Italy's general election campaign, a ruling that makes a verdict likely before the February vote.

Berlusconi's lawyer accused the court of "interfering heavily" in the Italian political campaign by refusing to suspend the trial so Berlusconi can dedicate himself to campaigning for his center-right coalition.

Berlusconi denounced the trial as "a comedy, a farce, a defamatory hoax," in an interview with Sky TG24.

Berlusconi is accused of having paid for sex with a Moroccan woman, Karima el-Mahroug, when she was 17, during racy parties at his villa near Milan, and then using his influence to cover it up.

BAMAKO, Mali – Despite a punishing bombardment by French warplanes, al-Qaida-linked insurgents grabbed more territory in Mali on Monday, seizing a strategic military camp that brought them far closer to the government's seat of power.

Declaring France had "opened the gates of hell" with its assault, the rebels threatened retribution.

"France ... has fallen into a trap much more dangerous than Iraq, Afghanistan or Somalia," said Omar Ould Hamaha, a leader of the Movement for Oneness and Jihad in West Africa, one of the rebel groups controlling the north, speaking on radio Europe l.

French fighter jets have been pummeling the insurgents' desert stronghold in the north since Friday, determined to shatter the Islamist domination of a region many fear could become a launchpad for terrorist attacks on the West and a base for coordination with al-Qaida in Yemen, Somalia and Pakistan.

The Islamist fighters responded with a counteroffensive Monday, overrunning the garrison town of Diabaly, about 100 miles north of Segou, the administrative capital of central Mali, said French Defense Minister Jean-Yves Le Drian

The French Embassy in Bamako immediately ordered the evacuation of the roughly 60 French nationals in the Segou region, said a French citizen who insisted on anonymity out of fear for her safety.

France expanded its aerial bombing campaign, launching airstrikes for the first time in central Mali to combat the new threat. But the intense assault, including raids by gunship helicopters and Mirage fighter jets, failed to halt the advance of the rebels, who were 250 miles from the capital, Bamako, in the far south.

The rebels "took Diabaly after fierce fighting and resistance from the Malian army, that couldn't hold them back," said Le Drian, the French defense minister.

Mali's military is in disarray and has let many towns fall with barely a shot fired.

Damascus suburbs attacked; dozens die

■ Syria strikes 3 areas to keep its rebels away

By Ben Hubbard Associated Press

BEIRUT – The Syrian government bombed areas around Damascus on Monday as part of its push to keep rebel fighters out of the capital, leaving many children among the dozens killed, anti-regime activists

An international aid organization cited such raids, along with rape and widespread destruction, as key factors in the exodus of more than a half-million Syrians to neighboring countries since the conflict began in March 2011.

In a report released Monday, the International Rescue Committee said Syrians face brutal killings, arbitrary arrests, torture, frequent airstrikes, sexual violence and diminishing medical services.

Violence continued inside Syria on Monday, as government fighter jets carried out lethal airstrikes on rebellious areas near the capital, Damascus.

One strike hit the suburb of Moadamiyeh, blasting the walls off apartment blocks and scattering rubble.

The Britain-based Syrian Observatory for Human Rights said 13 people were killed in the blast, eight children and five women.

The group, which relies on contacts in Syria, also reported deadly airstrikes in two other suburbs, saying at least 45 people were killed in and around the capital Monday.

Saturday Evening Post gets a new look, new home

By Will Higgins The Indianapolis Star

INDIANAPOLIS - The Saturday Evening Post for many years was a major player in U.S. media, publishing original stories by William Faulkner, Edgar Allan Poe, F. Scott Fitzgerald and on

The magazine's famously folksy covers were iconic: The Post made Norman Rockwell.

The old buzz — 6 million subscribers — died away decades ago, and in a tough economy, the magazine's readership, steeply reduced, is flat. Revenue is down. Today, just breaking even would be terrific.

Now comes an attempted turnaround — a redesign aimed at doubling readership and restoring vibrancy to the Post, which has been published in Indianapolis since 1970, but soon will move its editorial staff to Philadelphia.

Its new look, which targets baby boomers, debuted in the January/February issue. On the cover: Shirley MacLaine, 78, who later this week appears as a character on the PBS hit series "Downton Abbey."

"The important thing is to get (the Post) to be part of the national conversation," said Steven Slon, a publishing industry veteran who was recently named the Post's associate publisher. "I want to hear people saying: `Did you read that article in The Saturday Evening Post?' "

The effect he's shooting for: "Vanity Fair meets Smithsonian.'

sition, although he began consulting with the Post in 2010, features an illustration of a frisky-seeming, fortyish-looking MacLaine alongside a tagline promising readers they'll learn her views on "love, laughter & when to quit yoga."

'It has been a long time since the Post put celebrities on the cover," Slon told The Indianapolis Star. "Now we're entering a long phase of celebrities, either on the cover or at least interviews inside.

Slon's cover-folk wish list: Alan Alda, David Letterman, Jay Leno, the original "Saturday Night Live" cast, Dick Van Dyke, Roseanne Barr, the Smothers brothers, Goldie Hawn.

The Post "had a storied past," she said, "but it's hard to know whether to get excited about it. I haven't seen (the Post) in like a million years."

The magazine's wouldbe turnaround comes at a hard time for print magazines. "You look at some of them, and they're having difficulties," said media consultant Jack W. Perry.

"I'm thinking of Newsweek and Time. But with The Saturday Evening Post being more featurey, it'll have a longer shelf life, which could certainly help

Newsweek printing last month and is now digital-only. Dozens of other magazines have gone out of business since the recession, and many of the survivors have struggled with not only the economic downturn and slump in advertising sales but more broadly with the paradigm shift in publishing brought on by the Internet.

The Post, founded in 1821 (it predates indoor plumbing), has battled new technology before. Decades ago, the new story-telling medium of television took a toll on the readership of all general-interest magazines, including the Post's.

The magazine has been published, first quarterly, now six times a year, in Indianapolis since local businessman/long-time citycounty council president Beurt SerVaas purchased the distressed title from its Philadelphia-based parent, Curtis Publishing.

For most of the past four decades, until 2008. the Post was the domain of SerVaas' wife, Cory SerVaas, a physician with a crusader-level interest in public health. She used the magazine to educate readers on various diseases and their prevention, in effect converting what had been a general-interest magazine into a health journal. Beurt SerVaas is 93,

Cory, 88. They have five children. A daughter, Joan SerVaas, is the Post's CEO and publisher. It is she who's behind the magazine's new direction. "I need to get subscribers," she said. "The magazine needs to stand on its own."

empty bag." With finances tight across the state, Spencer predicts school districts least able to afford it will be stuck with a "pretty good bill."

School districts will have to find fast cash to cover the cost of the outstanding insurance claims.

"There couldn't be a worse time for this to happen," said Bill Scott, executive director of the Kentucky School Boards Association. "And we're just very, very sorry that the timing was so unfortunate.'

School districts are receiving fewer federal dollars, state funding is stagnant, and, in some cases, there have been losses in local revenue.

It has all added up to widespread layoffs in recent years.

About 40 percent of the state's 174 school districts participate in the insurance program, but all will share in paying past claims because all have been a part of the program at some point.

The individual shares will likely range from less than $100,000 for some districts to more than $1 million for others. Fayette County, the state's second largest district, is facing a bill that could be somewhere between $1 million and $2 million Spencer said he hopes Henderson County Schools isn't affected at all, but it depends on how far back KSBIT goes with its financial assessments. The district is currently covered by Kentucky Employers Mutual Insurance for workman's compensation and is using Ohio Casualty for property and liability coverage. Union County has the exact same coverage. KSBIT was the carrier for lines of business except worker's comp until the end of 2012, said Malinda Beauchamp, public relations coordinator for Union County Schools. Webster County Schools also uses KEMI for workman's comp and WRM America covers property and liability insurance. The district used KS-BIT intermittently at some points during the last 12 to 15 years, but most of the time has had different insurance carriers, said

President willing to negotiate budget shortfall with GOP The Associated Press

WASHINGTON – Declaring "we are not a deadbeat nation," President Obama warned on Monday that Social Security checks and veterans' benefits will be delayed if congressional Republicans fail to increase the government's borrowing authority in a looming showdown over the nation's debt and spending.

Obama said he was willing to negotiate deficit reduction with GOP leaders but insisted that those talks be separate from decisions to raise the $16.4 trillion debt ceiling and avert a possible first-ever national default.

They will not collect a ransom in exchange for not crashing the American economy," Obama said in a news conference one week before he is sworn in for a second term. "What I will not do is to have that negotiation with a gun at the head of the American people.'

Bitter brinkmanship between the White House and congressional Republicans over spending has become a defining event over the past four years, testing both Obama's leverage and his resolve at different moments of his presidency. House Speaker John Boehner brushed off Obama's insistence on separating the debt ceiling from negotiations over spending cuts.

'The American people do not support raising the debt ceiling without reducing government spending at the same time," Boehner said. "The consequences of failing to increase the debt ceiling are real, but so, too, are the consequences of allowing our spending problem to go unre-

Underscoring the urgency, Treasury Secretary Timothy Geithner said in a letter to Boehner on Monday that the government will exhaust its borrowing limit as soon as mid-February, earlier than expected. The Treasury has been using bookkeeping maneuvers to keep from surpassing the debt ceiling, but Geithner said those measures will be exhausted by mid-February to early March.

In addition to noting possible effects on older Americans and veterans, Obama recited a litany of possible consequences if Congress fails to raise the debt ceiling, including sending the economy back into recession. We might not be able to pay our troops, or honor our contracts with small business owners," he said. "Food inspectors, air traffic controllers, specialists who track down loose nuclear materials wouldn't get their paychecks. Investors around the world will ask if the United States of America is in fact a safe bet. Markets could go haywire, interest rates would spike for anybody who borrows money. Every homeowner with a mortgage, every student with a college loan, every small business owner who wants to grow and hire.'

At this moment, the government faces three looming deadlines: The debt limit must be raised soon to meet spending obligations and prevent a first-ever default, a series of across-the-board spending cuts is to kick in on March 1, and funding for most government programs will run out on March 27.

After Obama won tax rate increases for wealthier Americans during budget negotiations last month, Republicans became doubly determined to win spending cuts. They see the confluence of events ahead of April 1 as their best opportunity.

Just weeks from hitting the first of the deadlines, the two sides are neither on the same page nor pursuing a common approach. In 2011, Obama and Boehner at least started off agreeing on the premise that the increase in the debt limit be matched dollar-for-dollar with deficit cuts, spread out over a decade. Obama ultimately won a $2.1 trillion debt increase, but only after agreeing to an equal amount of spending cuts over 10 years

Cardinals celebrate No. 1 ranking

U of L rallies to beat UConn, 73-58

By Jim O'Connell Associated Press

HARTFORD, Conn. - Louisville waited 20 minutes to prove the Cardinals deserved the No. 1 ranking.

It took the same amount of time for their guards to show they could be the best backcourt in the country even when they don't spend all that much time together on the court.

Russ Smith had 23 points and Peyton Siva managed 11 in a foul-plagued 22 minutes and the Cardinals, playing just hours after they moved to the top of the poll, beat Connecticut 73-58 on Monday night.

The Cardinals (16-1, 4-0

Big East) won their 11th straight game and like the others they relied on their star backcourt and pressure defense.

Siva, the conference preseason Player of the Year, picked up his second foul just 3:47 into the game. Not only did the Cardinals lose a veteran leader when the senior went out but Smith, the leading scorer at 18.7 points per game, had to assume more of a role in running the offense. It didn't hurt his scoring much, though, as he had 15 points on 7-of-13 shooting as Connecticut took a 34-28 halftime lead.

Siva picked up his third foul with 14:21 to play in the game and he returned to the bench. When he came back in the game with 10 minutes left, Smith went to the bench for treatment. Siva hit a 3-pointer 50 seconds later as part of the game-changing 19-5

"We did a good job of weathering a Peyton Siva storm, with him out," Louisville coach Rick Pitino said. "Once he came back and we weathered that storm, we were able to play much better defense and much better offense." That is an understate-

Lady Colonels gun down Tilghman

■ Early barrage sends HCHS to 68-51 win over Tornado

By Mitchell Stinson Gleaner correspondent

Three days after enduring an awful shooting night in a narrow victory over Webster County, the Henderson County Lady Colonels put on a firsthalf marksmanship clinic against Paducah Tilghman on Monday and exploded to a 25-point lead.

It's a good thing too, because the Lady Tornado stormed back behind their electric point guard and made a game of it before Henderson pulled away to a 68-51 win at Colonel

We were making shots and they couldn't keep up,' Henderson County coach Jeff Haile said of his team's early mastery.

Nobody stroked it better than Maci Brown, who drained four 3-pointers in the first quarter alone. When she hit a step-back 3 in the second period, it gave the Lady Colonels their biggest lead at 38-13. Kacie Wallace contributed to the sharpshooting with a pair of 3-pointers, a long 2 and a couple layups, while Ellie Fruit showed off her post game by sinking four buckets in the paint. Why did the team shoot so much better on this night? Brown had an explanation: "Me, Kacie and Ellie stayed after practice and (took) a lot of shots," she said. Practice made perfect for a while, at least. But the tide began turning late in the second quarter when Henderson County's Callie Francis eyes the basket after driving past Paducah Tilghman's Chelsey Shumpert for a layup during the first half of Monday's game at Colonel Gym.

5-foot-3 Chelsey Shumpert strapped the Lady Tornado on her back and carried them into contention. A lightning-quick penetrator who can also pull up from 3-point range, the University of Tennessee-Chattanooga recruit scored 10 straight points for her team as Tilghman narrowed the deficit to 18 at halftime. When the Lady Colonels went zone in the third period, Shumpert knocked down a pair of 3-pointers the second one cutting the lead to 46-39. On defense, Tilghman pressured with a trapping attack and an occasional press. Even when Henderson's girls got open, the shots weren't falling like they did earlier.

Entering the fourth quarter with a 10-point edge, the Lady Colonels finally got rolling again. After Joya Smith's put-back cut the lead to single digits they went on an 8-1 run, culminated by another Brown 3-point bomb. Now the margin was 15 points with 4:39 remaining.

Tilghman countered with a 7-1 run, making it 60-51 on a Shumpert 3, but Henderson controlled the final two and a half minutes. Brooke Tapp scored five straight points for Henderson and yanked down a crucial offensive rebound off her own missed free throw. In the last couple minutes Henderson secured victory by going 6-for-6 at the charity

Shumpert finished with a game-high 29 points, dished out several assists and played some energetic defense at the other end. "She's our leader out there on the court," said Lady Tornado coach Roderick Thomas. "She didn't do anything (tonight) she doesn't normally do."

Henderson County eventually slowed her down with a box-and-one defense. Samantha Carter got the challenging assignment of staying in Shumpert's face.

"I thought Sam did a good job guarding her in the fourth quarter," Haile said. "(And) she had some help."

While Shumpert was the only Tilghman girl in double figures, Henderson County prevailed with a more balanced attack. Wallace scored a teamhigh 20 points, Brown had 18 on six 3-pointers and Fruit chipped in with 15.

Calipari hopes inconsistent Wildcats will start to 'buy in'

Kentucky tries to rebound against Tennessee

By Gary Graves Associated Press

LEXINGTON – John Calipari is hoping his young Kentucky Wildcats finally get the message after their latest lesson in what it takes to win.

His team appeared to be progressing from a disappointing nonconference showing. Then came Saturday's loss to Texas A&M Kentucky's first at home in Southeastern Conference play under Calipari.

The Wildcats (10-5, 1-1 Southeastern Conference) believe there's time to regroup and fulfill expectations of winning another league title, and tonight's game against Tennessee (8-6, 0-2) offers a good opportunity to reboot.

Calipari hopes the 83-71 loss to the Aggies will finally help his young Wildcats squad "buy in" to his philosophy of being successful through commitment, hustle and trust traits Kentucky has sporadically demonstrated Freshman center Wil-this season. lie Cauley-Stein said the Wildcats seemed to embrace Calipari's philosophy after three weeks of conditioning and team building in "Camp Cal," winning four of their final five nonconference games. But Kentucky stumbled in its SEC opener, allowing Vanderbilt to go an 18-0 run before escaping with a 60-58 road win; Texas A&M scored 11 straight against the Wildcats to

"The difference is we weren't in conference play," Cauley-Stein said.

'The SEC's a tough league and we weren't playing that many games before, just doing a lot of practice. It seemed like were moving forward and in it together but once the (league) games started it seemed like we reverted back to the old us in the beginning."

The Wildcats' early season struggles were tied in part to players trying to do too much individually rather than trusting each other. Some adjustment was to be expected considering the defending national champions were trying to blend their latest group of heralded rookies — Nerlens Noel, Alex Poythress, Archie Good-

Calipari has noted that that's one difference between this year's group of freshmen and recent rookie classes, particularly last year's tandem of Anthony Davis and Michael Kidd-Gilchrist that led Kentucky to its eighth title. Despite their obvious talent and leadership skills, the coach noted their willingness to work with veterans such as Doron Lamb, Terrence Jones, Darius Miller and Marquis Teague.

The lack of experience, inconsistent point guard play and effort has all added up to Kentucky falling out of the Top 25 for the first time under Calipari and the end of the Wildcats' 54-game home winning streak.

There's "no one here to mimic," Calipari said. There is no one here to imitate. This team doesn't have the stopper that those other teams have had, one guy to just go guard somebody. But this team has some things that those other teams didn't have. I've never had a team this long. We're an attacking team, which is pretty good but those two areas, when a team gets on a run and you don't have a guy that

Murray looks comfortable as major winner

■ U.S. Open champ cruises in opener

By John Pye Associated Press

MELBOURNE, Australia - Playing his first Grand Slam match as a major winner, Andy Murray looked quite comfortable in his return to the Australian Open.

Murray beat Robin Haase of the Netherlands 6-3, 6-1, 6-3 in the opening round at Melbourne Park today.

Asked what it felt like to play after his triumph at the U.S. Open, where he became the first British man since 1936 to win a major title, the thirdranked Murray said: "I can try and focus on the second part of my career now.'

The 25-year-old Murray seemed more at ease and relaxed than he has been in previous trips to the season's first major.

"It was a good start, nice to win in straight sets," he said. "It was the hottest day we've had for a while so the court was playing much quicker."

After a record heat wave early last week, the last few days in Melbourne have been cool. The temperature was heading toward 84 degrees when Murray was on Rod Laver

It's been 12 months since Murray started working with eight-time major winner Ivan Lendl, and he attributes much of the success in his breakthrough 2012 to his partnership with his new coach.

It's relaxed "in front of the cameras, yeah," Murray joked. "Behind closed doors he works me very

'We've had a very good relationship so far. He's very honest, very open. He doesn't lie to you, he tells you exactly how it is and that's exactly what I needed."

In early women's matches today, 42-year-old Kimiko Date-Krumm upset No. 12-seeded Nadia Petrova of Russia 6-2, 6-0, and former No. 1-ranked Caroline Wozniacki won the last six games to beat Sabine Lisicki of Germany 2-6, 6-3, Former U.S. Open and French Open champion Svetlana Kuznetsova continued her comeback from a knee injury that kept her out of the U.S. Open, ending her run of 40 consecutive majors.

Also, No. 14 Maria Kirilenko had a 6-4, 6-2 win over American Vania King, and China's Peng Shuai beat Canada's Rebecca Marino 6-3, 6-0.

Novak Djokovic started his bid for a third consecutive Australian title on Monday, posting a 6-2, 6-4, 7-5 win over Paul-Henri Mathieu.

"Hello, everybody, it's great to be back," he told the big crowd after his first match at Melbourne Park since his epic five-set win over Rafael Nadal in last year's final. "I have great memories.'

Banged up Gators add Prather to growing injured

By Mark Long Associated Press

GAINESVILLE, Fla. - Casev Prather is the latest Florida player on the mend.

Prather will be out 10 to 14 days, including Thursday's game at Texas A&M, after sustaining a highankle sprain in Saturday's win at LSU. Prather, a junior averaging 6.8 points and 3.3 rebounds, was wearing a walking boot on his left foot and using crutches Monday.

The 10th-ranked Gators (12-2, 2-0 Southeastern Conference) already are dealing with injuries to guard Mike Rosario, guard Scottie Wilbekin, forward Erik Murphy and forward Will Yeguete.

Rosario sat out Saturday's game with a sprained left ankle, but has been cleared to practice and play. Wilbekin (finger) and Murphy (rib) are playing with broken bones, and Yeguete is getting more tests to see if there are more issues than tendinitis in his right knee.

"A team that's able to bounce back and play a really good game with some of their best players out, that shows a lot about their team," center Pat Young said. "Just wait until we have everybody healthy. Hopefully, later in the season we won't have any injuries affecting us."

With all the injuries hampering Florida, Prather started the last games and played well.

It seemed like a turning point for his season, which got off to a slow start.

Prather missed the first four games because of a concussion sustained in practice.

And in his first few minutes on the court against UCF in November, he busted his lip and needed stiches.

"Can't get out of the way, right?" coach Billy Donovan said. "He started the year with the concussions and it took him a while to get in the flow and then, you know, he's been playing really good basketball.... So it's unfortunate that he's had to deal with some different things throughout the course of his career. But thank God it's not a severe high-ankle sprain where you're out for a month to six weeks. It's something hopefully he can get back."

Yeguete's injury could linger the longest. Yeguete is averaging 6.5 points and 6.6 rebounds, and is the team's best post defender.

"They deserve the No. 1 ranking," Connecticut coach Kevin Ollie said. "They have talent. They play together. They play hard. Whoever's open they get the ball to. And they have those two amazing guards. Siva and Russ put pressure on our offense and defense the whole night."

Connecticut, which shot 53.8 percent from the field in the first half, had just three field goals in the opening 13 minutes of the second half as Louisville went ahead 60-44.

The Huskies, who went 9 minutes without a field goal at one stretch, had trouble moving the ball against the fullcourt pressure and 2-3 zone of the Cardinals.

The Huskies had seven turnovers in the first 11 minutes of the second half, matching their total in the first half. "In the second half, we came out and we put it all together," Siva said. "The second half, I just tried to get everybody going. " Louisville shot 60.7 percent in the second half (17 of 28) and hit an even 50 percent for the game. Connecticut scored the first basket of the second half for a 36-28 lead but that's when Louisville started looking like the No. 1 team in the country.

They went on an 8-0 run in which Smith had four gave Louisville a 47-41 lead with 12:18 to play. "They came out in the second half, and I don't know what Pitino said to the, but he must have something," Ollie said. "They played very, very hard in the second half, They took it to us." The only other time Louisville was ranked No.

just says, 'let me guard him.' That's the difference. "We're still developing things within this team and that happens over time. It doesn't happen overnight. It doesn't happen in one game. There has to be crisis along the way and they've got to adjust to it. They've got to show and grow, learn from it."

Harrow's recent improvement to become Kentucky's point guard has helped the process. But Saturday's game showed that the Wildcats' current edition has yet to develop that same selflessness on a consistent basis.

Against Texas A&M, Kentucky struggled inside and on the perimeter. The Wildcats were outrebounded Kentucky 35-30 and Aggies fifth-year senior Elston Turner scored 40 points, including six of his team's nine 3-pointers.

Unless the mindset changes in a hurry, Kentucky could also be facing a second consecutive league loss. Tennessee is eager to prove itself in the SEC and know there's no better way to do that than against the Wildcats.

They're as talented as any of the Kentucky teams," Volunteers guard Skylar McBee said. "They don't necessarily jell as well as some of the other (Kentucky) teams that I've seen have. ... I don't think they have the leadership from an older players' standpoint that the other teams have had. Hopefully, we can get in there and get them rattled early, and hopefully that will sustain throughout the game."

Tennessee's main goal against Kentucky is avoiding falling behind big. The Vols trailed Xavier by 10 before rallying to win 51-47; they were down 21 against Memphis before losing by just five. The Volunteers played Alabama much closer in Saturday's 68-65 loss but couldn't overcome 16 turnovers.

Tennessee is confident they can win at Rupp Arena. Jordan McRae is averaging 24.3 points over his last three games and ranks second in SEC contests with a 23.5-point average. The Vols have also done well against defending national champions, going 7-2 in nine such games – including two wins against Kentucky in 1999.

Associated Press

FLOWERY BRANCH, Ga. - A slip of the tongue gave away Atlanta coach Mike Smith's focus.

Smith was just starting his review Monday of the Falcons' 30-28 win over the Seattle Seahawks in the NFC divisional playoffs when it became clear his thoughts were on this week's NFC championship game against the San Francisco 49ers.

"We knew the San Francisco Forty ... excuse me, the Seattle Seahawks, were a very good football team and they showed a lot of resiliency," Smith said before smiling after catching his verbal miscue.

"We were very fortunate to make the plays there at the end of the game and get the win," he said.

The win over Seattle Sunday was the first for Smith and quarterback Matt Ryan in four postseason games with Atlanta. There was much talk after the game that the longawaited first playoff win was the most important for the Falcons and would allow Ryan and other players to relax.

Smith shot down both theories.

"I don't think we'll be able to play looser," Smith said. "I think we've got to get back into our preparation mode. I know many people have talked about the outcome and what does it mean to the Atlanta Falcons. It means we have an opportunity to play again and in the playoffs you want to keep playing. I think our guys understand the challenge this week is

The Falcons are the top seed in the NFC playoffs for the second time in three seasons. Atlanta lost at home to Green Bay as the top seed following the 2010 regular season and then lost in the first round at the New York Giants last year.

Ryan and the Falcons built leads of 20-0 and 27-7 against Seattle before falling behind 28-27 with 31 seconds left. Then Ryan completed passes to Harry Douglas, for 22 yards, and Tony Gonzalez, for 19 vards, to set up Matt Bryant's go-ahead 49-yard field goal with 13 seconds to go.

Smith said it was a "fun' win for the team and the city of Atlanta, but he said it didn't mean the Falcons have realized their goals.

"Our goals and our expectations are a lot higher than just winning one playoff game," he said.

The Falcons will be home again for Sunday's NFC championship game as they look to advance to the Super Bowl for the second time in franchise history. The 1998 season ended with a Super Bowl loss to the Denver Broncos.

Ryan and some of his teammates acknowledged they are glad there will be no more questions about not winning a postseason

"But at the same time, our goal is not to win one playoff game," Ryan said. Our goal isn't to stop answering that question.

"Our goals are still in front of us. We still have two more games to go. That's the mind-set I have. That's the mind-set this team has.'

Atlanta Falcons free safety Thomas DeCoud breaks up a pass intended for Seattle Seahawks wide receiver Sidney Rice during the second half of Sunday's NFC divisional playoff game in Atlanta. The Falcons won 30-28.

Asked if the monkey is off the team's back, linebacker Sean Weatherspoon said "maybe a little bit" before also saying the team had bigger goals.

"The outsiders said we can't win in the playoffs, now they have to come up with other things to say,' Weatherspoon said. "Our goal is to get the next win and then the next one after

Smith said he didn't sleep well Sunday night, but not because of a big celebration.

"No, not celebrating," he said. "For everybody involved, that was a fun football game and it's hard to unwind from fun football games. I think for everybody at least here in Atlanta it certainly was. Then I got going this morning on San Francisco."

There may be little sleep for Smith's defensive coaches this week as the Falcons prepare a plan to contain 49ers quarterback Colin Kaepernick.

Kaepernick passed for 263 yards and rushed for 181 yards — a playoff record for a quarterback in San Francisco's 45-31 win over Green Bay on Saturday.

The Falcons couldn't stop Seattle quarterback Russell Wilson, who had seven carries for 60 yards and a touchdown while passing for 385 yards and two touchdowns.

Patriots hope to continue success without Gronkowski

By Howard Ulman

Associated Press

FOXBOROUGH, Mass. – The New England Patriots have done just fine without Rob Gronkowski.

So far. On Sunday, they'll see whether that continues or if their valuable tight end's absence will keep them from a second straight Super Bowl appearance.

"Certainly, Rob is a unique player and he has some skills that allow you to do special things with him," offensive coordinator Josh McDaniels said Monday. "I don't think it's really fair to say you just plug somebody in and off after Gronkowski broke his left arm on the Patriots' seventh offensive play of their 41-28 win over the Houston Texans in Sunday's AFC divisional playoff game.

Michael Hoomanawanui filled in well enough

He'll probably do it again in the conference championship game against the Ray Lewisled defense of the Baltimore Ravens following Gronkowski's seasonending surgery Monday. 'Michael did a great job with the things we asked him to do," McDaniels said. "He certainly did a good job in protection and in the running game." Hoomanawanui didn't catch any passes. But Gronkowski, who had 90 receptions last season and 55 in 11 games this season, triots' two games against Houston this season. And they dominated both contests. Gronkowski was side-had no catches in the Pa-lined for the 42-14 rout on Dec. 10, the third of five games he missed after breaking his left forearm while blocking on an extra point late in a 59-24 win over the Indianapolis Colts on Nov. 18. He sat out the rest of Sunday's game after breaking his arm when he landed on it after catching a pass down the right sideline by Tom Brady that was ruled incomplete because Gronkowski didn't get both feet inbounds. He had surgery on Monday, a person with knowledge of the operation said, speaking on condition of anonymity because the team has not announced the surgery. The Patriots were 7-3 before Gronkowski was injured then went 4-1 without him. He returned for the regular-season finale, a 28-0 win over the Miami Dolphins in which he caught a touchdown pass. But he played only 25 of the Patriots' 80 offensive snaps in that game. "We've played a bunch of games now, we've never really been fully healthy yet and obviously now won't be," Brady said Monday during his regular weekly appearance on WEEI radio. "But you know what? We've still got a very good team."

The Patriots also played without running back Danny Woodhead after he hurt his thumb while running with the ball on their first offensive play. Shane Vereen stepped in and scored three touchdowns - two on receptions and one on a run. "That's a huge credit to our coaching staff and Tom as well, but that's what's expected of us," said Vereen, who had 124 total yards — 41 on seven rushes and 83 on five receptions. "When some-one goes down, you're expected to step in and do your job." Woodhead returned to the sidelines but never got back in the game, although coach Bill Belichick said Monday he could have played.

Coca-Cola to address obesity for first time

By Candice Choi Associated Press

NEW YORK - Coca-Cola became one of the world's most powerful brands by equating its soft drinks with happiness.

Now it's taking to the airwaves for the first time to address a growing cloud over the industry: obesity.

The Atlanta-based company on Monday will begin airing a two-minute spot during the highest-rated shows on CNN, Fox News and MSNBC in hopes of becoming a stronger voice in the intensifying debate over sodas and their impact on public health.

The ad lays out Coca-Cola's record of providing drinks with fewer calories over the years and notes that weight gain is the result of consuming too many calories of any kind not just soda.

Coca-Cola says the campaign will kick off a variety of moves that help address obesity in the year ahead, such as providing more diet options at soda fountains.

For Coca-Cola, the world's No. 1 beverage company, the ads reflect the mounting pressures on the broader industry. Later this year, New York City is set to put into effect a first-in-the-nation cap on the size of soft drinks sold at restaurants, movie theaters, sports arenas and

Diana Garza Ciarlante, a spokeswoman for Coca-Cola Co., said the new ads aren't a reaction to any negative public sentiment but that the company felt it needed to address "the issue of the times" and be other venues.

part of the discussion on obesity.

"We have not done a good enough job in telling our story and being consistent in telling our story," she said.

A 30-second ad, which will run later this week during "American Idol" and before the Super Bowl next month, is much more reminiscent of catchy, upbeat advertising people have come to expect from Coca-Cola.

It features a montage of activities that add up to burning off the "140 happy calories" in a can of Coke: walking a dog, dancing, sharing a laugh with friends and doing a victory dance after bowling a strike.

Garza Ciarlante said the ad, a version of which ran in Brazil last month, is intended to address the widespread confusion about the number of calories in soda.

She said the company's consumer research showed people thought there were as many as 900 calories in a can of soda.

Among the options under consideration is putting the amount of activity needed to burn off the calories in a drink on cans and bottles.

Coca-Cola notes it has already made several moves to help customers make smarter choices, such as putting calorie counts on the front of its cans and bottles in the U.S. Last year, it also started posting calorie information on its vending machines ahead of a regulation that will require soda companies to do so by

Toyota retakes auto sales crown

Toyota has once again dethroned General Motors as the world's top-selling automaker.

The Japanese company sold 9.7 million cars and trucks worldwide in 2012, although it's still counting. GM sold 9.29 million.

Both companies saw higher sales, but Toyota's growth was far larger as it rolled out new versions of popular models like the Camry. GM executives promised sales growth this year, especially in the U.S. Both companies say publicly that they don't care about who wins, but concede that the crown is an important morale booster for employees.

In its lawsuit, the RTA alleges that United Aviation Fuels Corp., a subsidy of United Airlines, has operated what it calls a "sham" office in the DeKalb County community of Sycamore since 2001.

Weaker Apple slows S&P 500

By Steve Rothwell Associated Press

NEW YORK - Apple held down the Standard & Poor's 500, pushing it further below the five-year high it reached last week, after the technology giant's stock sank following a report that demand for the iPhone 5 may be weaker than expected. The Dow Jones industrial average edged higher. The Dow rose 18.89 points to 13,507.32 Monday, having fallen as much as 29 points at the start of the day. The S&P 500 fell 1.37 point to 1,470.68. The Nasdaq composite index fell 8.13 points to 3,117.50

The S&P 500 closed at a five-year high of 1,472 Thursday, after a solid start to the fourth-quarter earnings reporting period.

Earnings reporting will pick up this week with many big U.S. banks, including JPMorgan Chase, Citigroup and Bank of America releasing results.

New, fuel-efficient Corvette bursts onto road after 9 years

the first all-new version in nine years. The king of American

By Tonm Krisher Associated Press

DETROIT - When General Motors engineers and designers started work on the next-generation Corvette, they drew up the usual requirements for the star of American muscle cars. Killer looks. Big engine. Handles like a race car.

But topping the list was something at odds with the roar of the car's big V-8: Gas 'There won't be a Corvette if we don't care about fuel economy," said Tadge Juechter, the car's chief engineer. But the 2014 Corvette is here, sports cars, driven by astronauts and celebrated in a Prince song, rolled out Sunday night in Detroit. It will arrive in showrooms this fall.

Getting there was tough for the 1,000-member Corvette team, which gave the car the code name "C7." GM's bankruptcy slowed development twice. With each delay, new safety and gas mileage regulations forced changes. The Corvette team overhauled the car: aluminum replaced steel, super-light rivets held parts together, and the V-8 engine kicked down to four cylinders at highway speeds, saving fuel.

GM said testing is still being done on the car's fuel economy, but it'll be better than the in the city and 26 on the highway. Juechter said the window sticker highway mileage won't reach 30 mpg, but he wouldn't be surprised to see some drivers get that or more. The company won't quote current base model's 16 mpg

a price on the 2014 model. But Juechter said someone who bought the current version can afford the new one. The Corvette starts at $49,600. That is more than $30,000 below what GM considers its chief competitor, the Porsche 911.

GM wouldn't give sales targets for the new car. Last year it sold only 14,000 of the aging Corvettes.

Porsche sold about 8,500 911s last year.

The 2014 Chevrolet Corvette Stingray debuted Sunday before the start of the media previews at the North American International Auto Show in Detroit.

Advice

Woman should find ways to deal with aunt

Dear Amy: I have an aunt (married to my dad's brother) with whom I have been fairly close over the past 18 years. I don't have any siblings, and our family is very small, so even though she is 16 years older than me, we have been very close.

We are drastically different in most ways she dropped out of high school, I have two master's degrees; she is a Republican, I am very liberal; I work outside the home, she doesn't — and we both have strong opinions. We also have children who are the same age, and that has helped us keep our connection.

When we disagree, she will stop talking to me for months at a time (she won't take or return my calls, etc.). She either won't talk about what happened, or if she does, it is through yelling and being obstinate.

Several times I have decided that I am done dealing with her, but eventually we get along again, and our families spend time together several times a year.

At the last two functions at our home, she has tried to start arguments with me in front of other people. I think this is rude and inappropriate, and I honestly wonder if there is something wrong with

I cannot invite my own mother to family functions because she thinks she is being entertaining by cutting me down in front of others, and I feel my aunt is quickly making her way into this category as well. What would you do?

- Fed Up Dear Fed Up: You can control this to some extent by anticipating that this woman will attempt to bait you.

And you can determine that you will not play this particular game, because if someone throws an argument and no one shows up, then the perpetrator is left more or less stewing in her own juice.

Something might be wrong with this aunt. She might have an illness, become argumentative when she drinks, or might have simply decided that she really doesn't like the cut of your jib.

You are already excluding your own mother from family functions, but I suggest you explore ways to cope with your aunt's behavior — a combination of ignoring and deflection might work — or you could mentally (or physically) leave the room.

Painful pleurisy likely caused by infection

DR.

Dear Dr. Roach: Would you please write about pleurisy? I suffered from it 30 years ago, and now I have it again. Are there any medications that will help me? Aspirin seems to work. -R.L.

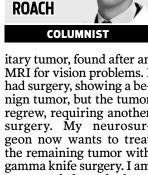

Dear R.I.: "Pleurisy" is a term for inflammation of the pleura, the lining of the lungs. The major symptom is pain in the chest that worsens in certain positions or when breathing. There are many causes of pleurisy, and treatment depends on the diagnosis.

Infection probably is the leading cause, and it can be via viruses or bacteria. Viral pleurisy can be mild or severe, and I have seen many cases so severe that we were concerned about very serious illness, like heart attack or blood clots in the lung. An old name for viral pleurisy is "devil's grip," which gives some idea of how bad it can make you feel.

Bacterial pleurisy usually is associated with pneumonia, with its attendant fever and cough. Tuberculosis used to be a common cause. but is not so anymore.

Pleurisy with fever or other worrisome symptoms should be evaluated right away, as should pleurisy that lasts more than a few days. You are taking aspirin, an anti-inflammatory medicine, which can be useful for non-urgent cases of pleurisy. However, I still would recommend getting this evaluated if it isn't getting better.

Death rates from cancer continue slight decline

By Lauran Neergaard Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Death rates from cancer are continuing to inch down, researchers reported Monday.

Now the question is how to hold onto those gains, and do even better, even as the population gets older and fatter, both risks for developing cancer.

There has been clear progress," said Dr. Otis Brawley of the American Cancer Society, which compiled the annual cancer report with government and cancer advocacy groups.

But bad diets, lack of physical activity and obesity together wield "incredible forces against this decline in mortality," Brawley said. He warned that over the next decade, that trio could surpass tobacco as the leading cause of cancer in the U.S.

Overall, deaths from cancer began slowly dropping in the 1990s, and Monday's report shows the trend holding. Among men, cancer death rates dropped by 1.8 percent a year between 2000 and 2009, and by 1.4 percent a year among women. The drops are thanks mostly to gains against some of the leading types — lung, colorectal, breast and prostate cancers — because of treatment advances and better screening.

The news isn't all good. Deaths still are rising for certain cancer types including liver, pancreatic and, among men, melanoma, the most serious kind of skin cancer.

Preventing cancer is better than treating it, but when it comes to new cases of cancer, the picture is more complicated.

Cancer incidence is dropping slightly among men, by just over half a percent a year, said the report published by the Journal of the National Cancer Institute. Prostate, lung and colorectal cancers all saw declines.

But for women, earlier drops have leveled off, the report found. That may be due in part to breast cancer. There were decreases in new breast cancer cases about a decade ago, as many women quit using hormone therapy after menopause. Since then, overall breast cancer incidence has plateaued, and rates have increased among black women.

Another problem area: Oral and anal cancers caused by HPV, the sexually transmitted human papillomavirus, are on the rise among both genders. HPV is better known for causing cervical cancer, and a protective vaccine is available. Government figures show just 32 percent of teen girls have received all three doses, fewer than in Canada, Britain and Australia. The vaccine was recommended for U.S. boys about a year ago.

Among children, overall cancer death rates are dropping by 1.8 percent a year, but incidence is continuing to increase by just over half a percent a year. Brawley said it's not clear why.

Drug companies align with top schools

■ Prospective deals can be worth millions to universities

By Alan Scher Zagier Associated Press

ST. LOUIS - In their quest for the next big drug discovery, pharmaceutical companies are increasingly teaming up with some of the nation's top universities, recruiting campus scientists as partners and offering schools multimillion-dollar deals to work on experimental drugs in development.

Big Pharma has long sought to profit from academia's innovations in more limited arrangements. Now the two sides are often joining forces as equals. But the drug makers' aggressive pursuit of university research has drawn the ire of academic purists who question whether the partnerships put profits ahead of, or on equal footing with, science for science's sake.

What it does is to blur the boundaries between academic medical centers and investor-owned companies," said Dr. Marcia Angell, former editor-inchief of the New England Iournal of Medicine and a prominent critic of the pharmaceutical industry's new coziness with major campuses.

Pfizer Inc., Astra Zeneca PLC and Eli Lilly and Co. are among the major international drug companies signing agreements with schools such as New York University, Harvard and the University of California at San Francisco.

Driving the change is the expiration of patents for such lucrative namebrand drugs as Seroquel, Lipitor and Protonix, which industry observers say accounted for nearly $36 billion in U.S. sales in 2011 and 2012. More than ever, drug makers need new revenue to replace diminished profits from drugs that now have generic rivals.

"There's a real need on Big Pharma to be innovative in how it fills its pipeline," said Van Ellis, a Washington-based life-sciences lawyer and partner with the Morrison & Foerster firm. "And academia is incredibly concerned with how to support research."

A 2011 research report by the Biotechnology Industry Organization found that iust 1 in 10 prospective drugs in clinical trials from late 2003 through 2010 ultimately received approval from the federal Food and Drug Administration, a testament to the low success rates of drugs still in the experimental phase. Previous reports showed an approval rate of 1 in 5 or 1 in 6.

One of the earliest campus collaborations was announced in 2010 between Washington University in St. Louis and Pfizer, which signed a five-year, $22.5 million deal to identify new uses for hundreds of drug compounds for which research had stalled during or on the verge of clinical trials.

At the time, Dr. Larry Shapiro, dean of the university's medical school, expressed his hope that the project would yield 'many discoveries.'

But Washington University's experience illustrates some of the industry's challenges. Scarcely two years later, Pfizer shut down the St. Louis lab to focus on partnerships at other schools.

Pfizer, based in New York, is continuing to fund its five initial research projects with the university, but has higher hopes for its five-year, $85 million partnership with the University of California at San Francisco, where two dozen Pfizer scientists are practically working sideby-side with their university counterparts in a 20,000-square-foot building on the school's sprawling Mission Bay campus.

In addition to its efforts in St. Louis and San Francisco, Pfizer has entered into similar research partnerships with the University of California at San Diego, Boston University, Harvard, Tufts, the University of Massachusetts and seven academic medical centers in New York City.

Harvard also has a research deal with French manufacturer Sanofi-Aventis and Belgian drug maker UCB. The Yale School of Medicine has a multivear cancer research collaboration with Gilead Sciences Inc., a California company that sells HIV treatments such as Atripla and Truvada. And the University of Pennsylvania has an umbrella agreement with Astra Zeneca PLC. whose U.S. headquarters are just down the road in

Once common hysterectomies drop in frequency

Bv Anita Creamer

Sacramento Bee

Not until after the surgery did Sandra Nauer realize how sick she'd been.

"Oh, my gosh, I had no idea I was in such bad shape," said Nauer, 44, of Galt, Calif.

After years of excruciating back pain, fatigue and other symptoms, she had an outpatient hysterectomy on May 22 on June 7, she returned to work running her catering business.

"I'm a new woman," she said. "Holy smokes, I feel like a million bucks.'

For earlier generations of women, hysterectomy was all but a rite of passage before age 50, albeit a difficult one. Even now, it remains the second-most-performed surgical procedure for American women still of reproductive age, and by age 60, one in three women has undergone the surgery, according to the Centers for Despite that, hysterectomy rates in the past three decades have dropped from almost 56 per 10,000 women to 33 per 10,000, American Congress of Obstetricians and Gynecologists statistics show, and the surgery itself has been streamlined into minimally invasive procedures that make the operation and recovery

Disease Control and Prevention.

But hysterectomy remains controversial. While many medical experts see good news in pioneering advances and quick recovery times, some of them also see bad news, as well, saying that up to two-thirds of the 600,000 hysterectomies performed each year in this country could be avoided.

Are too many women undergoing hysterectomies, even now? Should women think twice before having the surgery?

'The rate has come down a little but not enough," said Dr. William Parker, UCLA School of Medicine clinical professor and author of "A Gynecologist's Second Opinion.'

"In the old days, hysterecpatients. We were taught that it was the solution for almost every complaint."

Today, alternative treatments often replace surgery, particularly for women below age 50.

For younger women, 90 percent of hysterectomies deal not with reproductive cancers but rather with pelvic pain; uterine fibroids, or benign tumors; excessive bleeding; and endometriosis.

For older women, the most common underlying diagnosis is cancer.

Side effects of the surgery which involves the removal of the ovaries in almost threefourths of patients - can include the early onset of menopause, bladder and bowel problems and loss of sex drive.

Research also shows that hysterectomy can increase a woman's risk of heart disease and lung cancer. "It's important that women understand, even if they're not having children any more, they tomy was all we had to offer for might like to have sex, and they might like not having a heart attack," said Nora Coffey, founder of the Pennsylvania-based Hysterectomy Education Resources and Services Foundation.

Whether the surgery is lifesaving or completely unnecessary, you deserve to know the consequences."

But other medical experts insist that alternative treatments are always their first choice before surgery.

Hormone treatments can help relieve abnormal uterine bleeding and other menstrual cycle disorders, for example, as can endometrial ablation. Similarly, medications can help shrink uterine fibroids.

There are certainly non-surgical ways to deal with female problems besides removing the uterus," said Dr. Wesley Hilger, medical director of Sutter Medical Center's minimally invasive gynecology program. "It's a conversation you have with the patient."

Lung cancer tests backed for older, heavy smokers

By Marilyn Marchione Associated Press

After decades of qualms about lung cancer screening, the American Cancer Society says there now is enough evidence to recommend it, but only for current and former heavy smokers ages 55 to 74 and after a frank talk about risks and benefits.

The new guidelines, announced Friday, are a cautious but exciting step against the world's most deadly cancer, doctors who wrote the advice say.

It is based on a big study in 2011 that found annual, low-dose CT scans — a type of X-ray — could cut the chances of dying of lung cancer by 20 percent and from any cause by nearly 7 percent.

The study only included older people who smoked a pack of cigarettes a day for 30 years or the equivalent, such as two packs a day for 15 years. Whether screening would help others isn't known, so scans were not advised for them.

'We're trying to make sure we restrict harm that might come from screening," such as unneeded biopsies and follow-up procedures when scans falsely suggest cancer, said Dr. Richard Wender, family medicine chief at Thomas Jefferson University in Philadelphia. Lung cancer is fairly rare before age 55, so "the benefits of screening are going to be less if you start at a younger age.

Wender, a former Cancer Society president, led the guidelines panel. Three of its 20 members have ties to companies that make cancer treatment or imaging products. The scans cost $100 to as much as $400 and are not covered by Medicare or private insurers.

"We believe insurance companies should cover this test for the right people — not for everybody," Wender said.

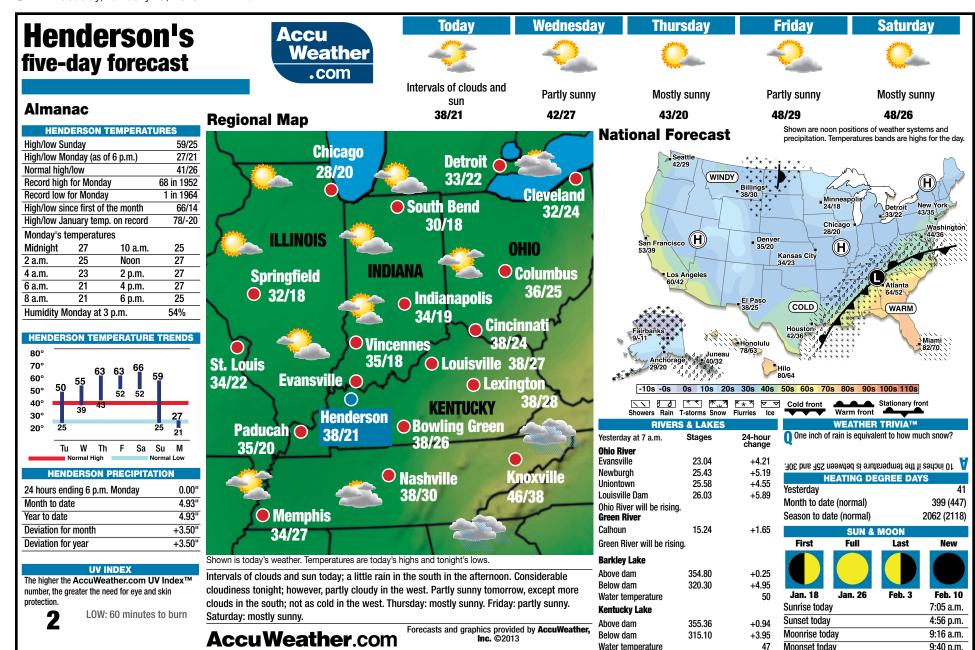

More than 160,000 people die of lung cancer in the United States alone each year, and the vast majority are diagnosed after the disease has spread.

Cancer screening has provoked great argument in recent years, especially over when and how often women should get mammograms and whether men should have PSA blood tests to look for prostate cancer.

Some of the most influential guidelines come from a government-appointed panel — the U.S. Preventive Services Task Force — but it hasn't considered lung cancer screening since 2004, when it said there wasn't enough evidence to recommend for or against it. An update is in the works now.

The Cancer Society used to recommend screening with chest X-rays but withdrew that advice in 1980 after studies showed they weren't saving lives. Since then, the CT scans have come into wider use, and several medical groups backed limited screening with them.

Many private companies also market CT scans directly to the public, including for some who are at lower risk for lung cancer than the people in major studies have been.

Greek gold mine savior to some, curse to others

Supporters cite boost to economy; opponents claim health issues, destroying natural beauty as downside

The Associated Press

IERISSOS, Greece - Barbed wire cuts across woodland patrolled by dozens of private security guards. Burly and stony-faced, they demand identity cards from anyone trying to pass through, and order cameras to be put away.

Beyond lies a precious prize: a gold mine — and its owners are taking no chances. Protesters, they say, have torched company property in violent demonstrations.

The oak- and beech-covered forests of northern Greece's Halkidiki peninsula have yielded various metals for more than 2,000 years. But as modern extraction and processing methods took over, they became a flashpoint in the debate over largescale mining, environmental protection, job creation and tourism.

Champions of an ambitious new mining project say that it will create jobs and pour hundreds of millions into the local economy, as Greece struggles with a devastating financial crisis. Opponents argue that mining will endanger lives through pollution, wipe out precious forests and drive tourists away from a region of striking natural Hellas Gold — 95 percent owned by Canadian mining company Eldorado Gold Inc. and the remaining 5 percent by Greek construction company Aktor — holds mining licenses for an area covering 317 square kilometers (122 sq. miles) with proven and probable reserves of lead, zinc, silver, gold and copper. Many see the foreign investment as vital to helping Greece emerge from what is essentially a depression, with a quarter of the workforce unemployed and the economy heading into a sixth year of recession.

"In this difficult time — but also regardless of the circumstances — we owe it to ourselves to ensure the best possible exploitation of wealth this country has to offer to drive growth and bolster the economy," Deputy Energy and Environment Minister Asimakis Papageorgiou said in Parliament during a recent acrimonious debate on the Halkidiki mines.

'No one doubts any longer that northern Greece is a source of mineral wealth, with a total wealth in metals exceeding euro20 billion," he said. "We can no longer accept this being left unexploited or barely exploited."

The mining company says fears about harm to the environment are unfounded.

"Our Greek projects follow strict EU and Greek environmental, health and safety regulations," said Eduardo Moura, Eldorado's vice-president and general manager for Greece. "If Canadians, Australians, Spaniards and others can benefit from responsible mining why would Greeks not do the same?

Local residents have formed a protest committee hoping to stop work on Eldorado's new gold and copper mine and processing plant in the area. They contend the project will devastate biodiversity and lead to pollution of the ground, air and water supply.

"This will cause a great deal of damage to our natural reserves," said Thanasis Krommydas, a local anti-gold campaign organizer. "(Greece) signs up to treaties to protect the environment with one hand, and destroys the environment with the other."

Opponents also argue that unlike many other countries, the Greek state gets no royalties from mine concessions, so stands to gain only taxes and jobs. Concessions granted in 2004 for Stratoni, one of the Halkidiki mines, are valid until 2026 and can be renewed twice for 25 years each time, free of charge.

"The Greek state has nothing to gain but environmental cost from the investment." Alexis Tsipras, head of the main opposition radical left Syriza party, thundered during the parliamentary debate.

The current conflict centers on the mine complex's Skouries project — a series of concessions with a collective area of 55 square kilometers (21 sq. miles) containing 3.6 million ounces of gold reserves and 736,000 tons of copper. Assuming that production matches Hellas Gold's estimates that it will extract up to 85 percent of the site's reserves, and commodity prices remain at their current levels, Skouires is on track to generate revenues of some $10 billion.

The company plans to extract the ore by means of an open pit as well as extensive underground tunnels. About 170 hectares (420 acres) of trees are being cleared for the pit — an area which the company says will be filled over Workers are seen in a gold mine complex in Skouries, in the Halkidiki peninsula in northern Greece in Octover last year. Mining company Hellas Gold expects the mine to be up and running by mid 2015 creating about 2000 jobs for the next five years.

and replanted once pit work is finished. A processing plant is also to be built.

Skouries is expected to be up and running by mid-2015 and to operate for about 25 years, Eldorado savs. It estimates total investment in Skouries to be $400

The mine complex includes another two projects, Stratoni and Olympiada. Along with a fourth mine in the northeastern border region of Thrace, Eldorado speaks of a eurol billion ($1.3 billion) investment in Greece over the next five years that will create 2,000 jobs, Moura said. "The region of southeast Europe is a focal point of our future business, and Greece is a major component of that strategy," Eldorado CEO Paul Wright said in Athens in December 2011. "The northeast of Greece is very, very prospective."

Hospital interpreters help patients navigate care

By Caitlin Huston

LOGANSPORT, Ind. - Mary Carmen Santella-Mercurio follows patients from consults to surgeries to the recovery room, but she's not a doctor.

As an interpreter at Logansport Memorial Hospital, Santella-Mercurio helps Spanish-speaking patients understand all aspects of their hospital visits, which can include everything from billing to sitting with the patient during a live surgery. For patients who speak a language outside of Spanish, the hospital uses a phone interpretation system.

Growing up in Argentina, Santella-Mercurio was expected to follow the family profession and become a doctor. But she chose instead to pursue teaching and translation and eventually ended up at Indiana Beef Products. Now, at the hospital, Santella-Mercurio said she feels like she's come full circle.

Since June 2001, Santella-Mercurio has been responsible for translating everything the health care providers say for the patients.

Because Santella-Mercurio sees some patients through multiple hospital visits, she says they often form a bond.

Today in history

The Associated Press

Today is Tuesday, Jan. 15, the 15th day of 2013. There are 350 days left in the year. Today's highlight in history:

On Jan. 15, 1943, work was completed on the Pentagon, headquarters of the U.S. Department of War (now Defense).

On this date:

In 1929, civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr. was born in Atlanta.

In 1947, the mutilated remains of 22-yearold Elizabeth Short, who came to be known as the "Black Dahlia," were found in a vacant Los Angeles lot; her slaying remains unsolved.

In 1954, Marilyn Monroe and Joe DiMaggio got married at San Francisco City Hall. (The marriage, however, lasted only about nine months.)

In 1961, a U.S. Air Force radar tower off the New Jersey coast collapsed into the Atlantic Ocean during a severe storm, killing all 28 men aboard.

In 1967, the Green Bay Packers of the National Football League defeated the Kansas City Chiefs of the American Football League 35-10 in the first AFL-NFL World Championship Game, retroactively known as Super Bowl I.

In 2009, US Airways Capt. Chesley "Sully" Sullenberger ditched his Airbus 320 in the Hudson River after a flock of birds disabled both engines; all 155 people aboard survived.

Ten years ago: Mickey Mouse and The Walt Disney Co. scored a big victory as the Supreme Court upheld longer copyright protections for cartoon characters, songs, books and other creations worth billions of dollars. Five years ago: Actor Brad Renfro, who as a youngster had played the title role in 'The Client," was found dead in his Los Angeles home; he was 25. One year ago: At the Golden Globes,

The Artist" won best musical or comedy; 'The Descendants" won best drama. THINK ABOUT IT

"One day we must come to see that peace is not merely a distant goal we seek, but that it is a means by which we arrive at that goal. We must pursue peaceful ends · Martin Luther King Jr. (1929-1968).

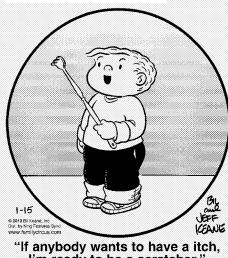

through peaceful means."
